ELOPEMENT AND PROBABLE SERFCTION.—M. A. Lovelady, (what a name!) a rifizer of this county, says the Platic (Mo.) Argas, a married man, and fulther to of irreproachable character, eloped on Tuesday night last, with Miss Martha Miller, a nices of his wife. Lovelady is a tall, spare man of swarthy complexion, and is about 29 years old. Miss Miller is a large woman, fair complected, black eyes, Roman nose, and is about 29 years old. Lovelady leaves behind a wite and one child. Their course is unknown; and this is to warm the romanunity upon which they may alight. The deserted wife is scarcely older that the young lady with whom he cloped. She is a very estimable woman, good looking, and most respectably connected. The event has east a gloom over a happy family, and sent a pang to many hearts.

Genth men, in times of doubt and difficulty,

We claim for our nuble standard bearers, Breekinskipper and Lase, that they have been nominated by a majority of the States of the Union; that ditteen of those States are certainly bemocratic; that seventeen of these States at Charleston co-operated in, agreed upon, and voted for our platform and the distinctive principles that have divided the party; that there was included in those seventeen States three-fourths of the electural votes that any Democratic nominee could possibly obtain; that our principles have received the approval and votes of every Democratic Senator in Congress, from the North, South, East, and West, except Mr. Douglas himself and one other; that they are sustained by three-fourths of the Democratic Representatives in Congress, by the President, and the eminent statesmen of his Cabinent; that they have been solemnly sanctioued and sustained by the highest Judicial tribunal known to the Constitution; that they are in themselves just and true; that the Democratic in Kentucky, In their last January Convention, declared that they were the principles of the party in this State. Those principles are founded upon the eternainstinets of justice and epublic y—aquality of person, equality of property, and equality of person, equality of property, and equality of States—they are principles eminently national, broad as the Constitution, and coextensive with the Union; and every voice which is intered and elfort made to promuigate and spread them abroad, is a voice and an effort to cement and perpetuate this glorions Confederacy of States.

In this canvass we appeul to the people to rally around the great principles of equality and justice, guarantied alike to all, under the Constitution, as the efficient means of escaping from prosen complications, and the sure and certain mode of transmitting our glorious Constitution and l'indu malimpaired to the remotest pos-

COL. PRESTON'S REMARKS. Coi. Presson said that he felt reluctant to embark in the expression of any political opinions at such a time, but the crisis in which the Democracy was placed demanded decision for the future welfare, not only of the Democra-Four different candidates were in the nert, and divided in opinion on the subject of the rights of the ritizens in the States and in the Territories, and the powers of the people. While the nation was most prosperous at home, and strong abroad, these discussions at home not only disracted the Opposition but had even severed the tracted the Opposition but had even severed the Democracy. The Democracy, six years since, had agreed, by the passage of the Nebraska bill, to adjourn the question, leaving it to the people to be decided, subject alone to the Constitution, by which it was understood that the Judiciary should be the final arbiter of the question. The same idea prevailed at Ciucinnati, and he felt assured Judge Douglas could never have received the support of the Southern States which he did receive in that Convention, if it had been understood that the Interpretation which he has since placed upon the bill and the Cincinnati platform, had then been entertained. Buchanan was nominated, and a new phase of the question arose.

Cincinnati platform, had then been entertained. Buchanan was nominated, and a new phase of the question arose.

How was it then, that this question was revivedance, to distract the party?

The questions arising under the Dred Scott case were settled by the Supreme Court in 1856. That celebrated decision determined that the Territories were the common property of the people of the United States; that their property rould be carried freely thither, and that it was beyond the power of Congress, or inferentially of the Territorial Legislatures, to abolish slavery or impair or destroy the right of poperty Inslaves. Immediately after that decision the contest between Mr. Douglas and Mr. Lincoln occurred.—Under the pressure of his adversary, Mr. Douglas reopened the whole question by construction, nullified the Dred Scott decision undlighted the flune anew. Was It the South that thus tore the question from before the judiciary to which it had been consigned, or Jindge Douglas? For his own part, he had always thought that Mr. Douglas should have lost the Senatorial race with Lincoln, and incured any sacrifice sconer than thus have revived mew the contest. If he had so lost the race, no power could have prevented him from being the candidate by the acclamation of the whole Democratic party.

Junge Douglas now, under the claim of non-intervention by Congress, became the candidate of a fraguent of the party. This was well enough as far as it went, but he (Mr. Preston) went further. He not only denied the power of Congress to confiscate his property, but he denied equally that of a Territorial Legislature, for If they did so it was a roberry, or if by hostile legislation they attacked it, it was tyrannical and unconstitutional.

Such, then, was the division of sentiment. It was another one of those attempts to temporize which should be resisted in the beginning. For a while it was possible there might be a show of success, but it was bound to perish before inflexible truth. The Southelaimed only equality and would accept nothing less. No hollow promises could defined, nor subtle constructions deceive them. The construction of Judge Douglas was against the whole bulk of the party. Only one Senator out of thirty-two, and not one third of the Democratic members of the Lower House of Congress agreed with him. As to his interpretation of the Dred Scott decision, made under the pressure of the stormy contest with Lincoln, there was not a single Judge of the Supreme Court, he believed, who made that decision, that would not saile at his attempt to evade its effects. Under these circumstances, he three himself upon his friends, with the cry that he was persecuted, and against the whole body of the Democracy. They insisted that his platform should alone be adopted, and he alone the nomlinee.

It was the first time in the history of the De-

[The tremenduons applause at this point, Indicated that the crowd stood by the Breckinridge banner.]

Kentucky will Indorse Breckinridge and Lane, and when the election shall have been decided in November, you will see that a majority of the States will also indorse them. They held the scatter will also indorse them.

Thus closed this grand demonstration-the argest, and most brilliant, and successful ever made in the city—a demonstration that struck terror into the hearts of those who, deceived by the stillness which preceded the coming storm, had flattered themselves that the friends of the city. It is conceded by some of Douglas' warmest friends, that Breckinridge's supporters are much more numerons in this county, and it is condidently believed that when investigation takes pince the strength claimed (?) for the Little Giant will vanish like the early mist of morning, leaving him scarcely a corporal' guard. The fact is, the masses are for Constitutional liberty and the States, and therefore will name yield a support to Douglas and his Squatter Sovreignty heresy. They will stand by the Constitution as interpreted by the highest tribunal of our government. They will trust to the Justice of their cause, and if call they must, it will be fighting gioriously for the right. THE UNION & THE CONSTITUTION! KENTUCKY'S FAVORITE SON

FOR VICE PRESIDENT! SPEECHES OF SIMRALL, PRESTON,

The Marion of the Mexican War"

Pursuant to a notice which had only thirty-six hours publicity, the friends of the Constitution. the Union, and the Equality of the States, who believe the election of the glorious standard-hearers of the Constitutional Democracy can alone perpetuate our glorious institutions, met in the Court House square Saturday night to ratify the nominations of BRECKINRIDGE and LANEto Indorse the action of the representatives of the Democratic States, who met in the Hall of the Maryland Institute, on the 23d of June-to repudiate the action of that portion of the national Democratic Convention which nominated DOUGLAS and FITZPATRICK, and to express their

Across the street from the Court House, a large and magnificent national flag, forty feet long by twenty wide, with the mames of BRECKINKIDGE and LANK in-scribed upon it, was suspended; and by the side of it, a large transparency, brilliantly lighted,

OR DISUNION."

BRECKINRIDGE AND LANE,

The nobic men of the First Ward, however, fairly bore off the pains. In addition to their transparencies, and a fine hand of music, they had a full-rigged ship, mounted on wheels, and filled with half a hundred of the gailant boys from up town, with banners flying, and hearts beating to the music of the Union. Bonfires were burulng in all the surrounding streets, two ands were discoursing sweet music, and rockets dazing through the air, while from all directions crowds of nich, women, and children were detail of the character of the nominations and the force and effect of the Conventions. The stale cry of "dismion" was raised against Mr. BRECKINRIDGE, but it would full voiceless before the trink. No act of his life rendered him liable to the charge. The principles upon which he was nominated were reported by the Committee on Resolutions of the whole Committee on Resolutions of the whole Convention at Charleston. They were carnestly supported by the whole Kentucky telegration. Were they, too, disminosists? The friends of Guthris, Lane, Seyanour, and Diekinson were warmly for them. as sompact as martin in the maintenance of their rights. He believed that the nomination of Brefernmense and the acceptance of the idatorum would strengthen the chances of the Union by proving to the other States of the South that they might rely upon Kentucky and all the other states for the support of their Constitutional rights, and not drive them to despair. The question might be asked "would the Democracy survive this schism?" For his own part, he had seen yast chasms in its ranks; he had seen the defection of the Van Buren part; against Cass, and the party revive lor victory. He had seen the schism of Benton, strong, able, and obdurate, and the party still triumphed; and when these great wrecks sunk without engulfing it, he felt an abiding faith that the vessel would awim, though the candidate of the Northwest might sink, dragging in the whirlpool behind him all the floating materials of the party. Col. Preston was frequently interrupted during his remarks by repeated bursts of applause, and he retired amid hearty and prolonged cheers.

Col. Hodge was next introduced to the andienceand welcomed with much enthusiasm.

GENTLEMEN: In accepting the invitation to ad-iress the people of Louisville, I trust that how-wer much you may differ with me upon my diews, you will at least exercise that integrity of

The disposition of this question has given rise of a party which claims that the people of a outhern State shall be prohibited from introucing into a Territory a certain kind of propity. The representative of that party enunciutes principles, which, if carried out to the

The second party, gentlemen, respectfully decline investigating the question at issue. They amounce as their platform, "the Constitution, the Union, and the enforcement of the laws." I am surprised that it lift not append the Doxology and the Psaims. [Langhter.] They make no explanation of their belief. I understand that the candidate of this party, however, gave an expression of his views on this question when he voted against the repeal of the Missonn Compromise, and against the Kansa-Nebraska hill. I take it that when the masses are excited—when the sovereign people are banded together for the settlement of the question now agitating the country, no man or set of men who think to dodge the Issue, can hope for success. [Cheers.]

The third party, countinued the speaker, ciaimed that the Territorial Legislatures were in themselves sovereign when the question arose. But he desired to ask whence their sovereignty originated? Certainly not from Congress, because Congress never ceded any such power. Could it be claimed by reasonable men that the Territories were absolutely independent of the Federal Constitution? If the power was given to a Territorial Legislature to dispose of questions, not of a local nature simply, but in their operations effecting the interests of the whole country, at what point would their power be restricted? He claimed that such thoetrine was permicions in its effects, was, in fact, destructive to the rights of the individual States, and in openviolation to the Constitution. The Douglas men claim that their favorite was the virtim of a retentless persecution. Eighteen months ago, in the contest with Mr. Lincoin, Mr. Douglas was proclaiming his Squatter Sovereignty doctrine, apparently oblivious to the fact, or in defiance of it, that the Demotratic party of Kentneky and Tennessee in the canvass of '54, was, through candidates for Governors of the respective States, emmeiating the principle that the people of the Southern States had a right to the Territories on the same footing as the Northern States. In defiance of this position of affoirs, he published his alkase to the world that he receded from the popularly recognized doctrine. The Little Giant had pulled on the seven lengue boots of an illustrious statesman, but his legs were too short, and he could only flounder about in a most Indicrous plight.

Of the fourth or National Democratic party, it is needless to say that Col. Hodge spoke nohily. We regret our hability to give a satisfactory report of the latter part of his remarks, owing to the confusion which ensued during their delivery, occasioned by some lawless persons in the crowd.

SPECH OF RON. L. W. POWELL.

Ex-Gov. Powell next addressed the meeting, but the clamor was so great that the reporter couldnot distinctly hear him. Amldst the uproar he ironically thanked them for greeting him with such rapturous applause; but said he would thank the crowd if they wouldn't appland quite so much. He referred to the unfortnante rupture in the Democratic party, a split to be deeply regretted, it might cause some to think that the great party which had existed for more than a half century would cease to exist. This was an error. It would survive with the Constitution; and its banners would only go down with the Union-itself. It had heen his intention to state what position, in his jindgment, the people of Keutneky should occupy in this contest, had time and circumstances permitted. He knew the motive of the stampen old party had been "principles, not men," and he could not believe they would abandon it now. SPEECH OF HON. L. W. POWELL. men," and he could not believe they would abandon it now.

In speaking of the disruption of the Baltimore Convention, he pointed out, as among the causes, the amonucement, long ago, by Judge Douglas, that he would accept no nomination except upon a certain platform. When before, had any aspirant for that elevated place, had the attlacity to dictate what should be the platform, of the Democratic party?

authacity to dictate what should be the platform, of the Democratic party?

But the followers of the Squatter Chieftain, having the najority, under an unjust unit rule, had foreda platform on the party which denied the equality of the States. And further to accomplish their purposes, they admitted to the Convention spin found elegations from the Southern States, simply because they were for Dong-las. Then the Convention coasing to be national, and not until then, those who represented the Constitutional Democracy retired from that hody, and made a nonlination upon a national platform—a platform upon which every man who loved the Constitution could stand.

Apologetic and Excusatory? We beg our city cotemporaries to make ves easy about the great BRECKINEIDGE and Lang demonstration. It must not be permitted to disturb the entente cordiale which has existed between them. They are both ashamed, no doubt, of the conduct of some of their political associated

We are not surprised; and, of course, we do not regret that the Douglashes and Bell men united with their usual cordiality to show an expectant public that they have pretty much monopolized the two extremes of society—the extremely and violently decent, and the extreme-We know neither of the organs of the Olipo

They are too sharp for that; though, in an emergency, they might excase it by saying their people were "excited and irritated" because an eminent statesman sees proper to act according to the dictates of his own conscience, and the little fault may, on that ground, be laid on the "youths of the party. And then Douglas is popular; and a few of his friends of course will be pardoned for 'an un mistakable" expression of their indignation, that others dared to believe that the great Squatter as betraved his party and his principles! And then, again, the speakers are, some of them, fortunate enough to have the confidence of the National Administration, and of their fellow-eltizens, and, therefore, gentlemen who have been relieved from the discharge of public duties by the one, or who never had the hard fortune to have any very onerous lahors linposed upon them by the other, may not unnaturally feel somewhat sore about it. There was not more than a hundred, in the 10,000 or 15,000 present, of them; and in the main, they were things in the shape of men, of whom even Plng-Ugly politicians and Douglas ward leaders may be ashamed-more can't be said. They were seen and marked; but who moved and directed them will not be known unless the parties to the transaction, in trying to shift the responsibility, make confessions to implicate themselves. The Democrat has already taken a portion of the blame on those for whom It speaks, while charging much on its allies; and whether mutual reerlminations expose the whole thing or not, an intelligent publie, who saw and heard, and will read, will fix the responsibility in the right place; and treating offense as if its enormity had been such as it was designed to be, the freemen of the State will visit a righteous retribution on the proper par

But Kentucky has no sympathy with either sectional candidate, supported mainly by a section and on sectional grounds; and she wants the doctrine of Territorial, like State sovereignty, carried unit, as the most conductive to non-agniation at Washington, and to the safety of the Union. It is noteworthy that also at the Bell raily in Louisville, the other night, only Breckindige was condemned, while Donglas was praised.—Let the conservative South beat Breckindige and Lincoln, if they can, but anyhow beat Breckindige. If Douglas has or shall have the less candidate to defeat Breckindige in the South, Bell's stumpers plainly lutinated that Bellites ought to go for Douglas for our Union's sake. But it Bell's chances be the lost, as they inslat, Douglasites ought to flock mader his Union banner and then there will be no doubt of Bell's carrying Kentucky, Tennessee, Missouri, Louiskan Maryland, Virginia, North Carolina, and Georgia, with considerable probability of Alabama Florida, Mississippl, and Delaware. Life of Abraham Lincoln. BY ONE WHO KNOWS HIM.

The subject of our blography was born in Bunker Hill, on the Fourth of July, 1776, and was one of the original signers of the preclons document which sealed our liberties on that day. We refer to the Declaration of Independence.—His father's name was Mr. Lincoln, his mother's, Mrs. Lincoln, and if he had sisters they were known as the Misses Lincoln. At the age of two years, young Abraham commenced splitting rails for a tiwing, singing beautiful hymns white so engaged, and displaying all those noble virtnes for which he has since been distinguished. When he was about ten years old, Boston suddenly became the hub of the universe and required so much greasing that clearly become were genly became the hub of the universe and required so much greasing that cleanly people were obliged to move away. The Lincolns went to Illinois; where Abraham became the aldest lawyer in the State in less than a week, and learned to chew tobacca. His reputation for cloquence was unparalleled—and, as a specimen of his wit, we give the following ANECDOTE. the one occasion Mr. Lincoln was splitting rails in the parlor of Judge Donglas' residence, when the latter joined him, and thinking to make a joke about our hero's extreme leanness, remarked.

"Why, Abe, you are a rall yourself."
Mr. Llucoin looked up from his work with that sublime glare which has often petrified u world, and gravely responded:
"You, sir, are the reverse of a rail."
Douglas immediately grasped his hat and carpet-lag, went to Washington, and asked the President to explain what Lincoln meant by that."

Life of Stephen Arnold Douglas. BY ONE WHO HAS KNOWN HIM SINCE HE WAS SO HIGH.

Mr. Douglas was born at Bennington, Vermont, on the Fourth of July, 1776, and demonstrated the utility of Squatter Sovereignty before he threw off crincline. His parents belonged to a noble Scatch family, and when Stephen was two years old, they enigrated with him to Hilmois. It was during this journey that he gave vent to a remark which has since become classical. His tather asked him if he would have an apple; and, on receiving an answer in the affirmative, made a "spill" in ht-preparatory to dividing it into two pleces—when Mr. Douglas suddenly grasped the whole, exclaining:

"The nuion must and shall be preserved."

This immortal sentence was immediately tele-

This immortal scattenee was immediately telegraphed to all the papers in the United States and Canada, and presented the election of Mr. Douglas to the office of Judge of good whisky is soon as he arrived in Illinois. When about on vers old, he commenced writing for Harbert's Magazine, and finally contributed a series of hymparas writers to the editorial. a the Senate last time, an exploit of his gave

While Mr. Douglas and his gigantic opponent, Lincolu, were canvassing, they agreed to hold a debate at Quincey, and allow the people to dedie which had the strongest claim to their votes. The meeting was a large one, and it did not take long for Douglas to get the hetter of the argument. Fluding the battle going against him, Lincoln drew his form to lis nimost hight, and looking down at the short figure of his rival, so devery pompously:

"Mr. Douglas, I cannot look at von without

"What is that?" asked our hero, good humor-

"The way of the wicked is short," "respond-lineoh, and fainted away.

The crowd applanded tremendonsly, but ouglas was not to be out done. Waiting until colubrate revived, he quietly said:
"And you remind me, Mr. Lineohn, of another saze."

"And you remind me, Mr. Lineoin, of another passage."
"What is that?" asked Lineoin.
"How long! O Lord, how long!" responded Donglas. He was elected.
By way of concluding our hiography, we give the following extract from one of Mr. Douglas' most cloquent speeches:
"* * Squatter Sovereiguty, gentlemen, [great applause,] is not the right of one man over another man, accorded by the constitution, but the right of another man over this man, or that man should be his own man, independent of every other man. This, gentlemen, is Squatter Sovereignty, without mitigation." [Great enthusiasm.]

Life of John Bell.

BY AN INTIMATE ACQUAINTANCE The Honorable John Bell was born on Mason and Dixon's land, of rich but pious parents, and was noted for his ringing voice. His extreme personal fearty suggested that delicious poem, in which the poetasks his triend, Brandon:

in which the poet asks his triend, Brandon:

"Be spent the earlier years of his life on a plantation, acquiring such fine cultivation, that his epistolary efforts are regarded with admiration by the whole world, and no man is considered a good scholar who is not familiar with Belt's letters. As Mr. Bell grew to manhood, he gradually eschewed all youthful society, and cultivated "old" gentlemen exclusively, and was noted for his venerable virtues. One one occasion, he won the friendship of a tea total society of old malds, under the following circumstances: Being asked if he believed the use of tobreco to be injurious, he promptly replied:
"If tobacco is chewed in a certain way, it will do no harm to any one."

As Mr. Bell was going from the Senate cham-per to his hotel, after delivering his celebrated peech on the reopening of the slave trade, he ass overtaken by a prominent politician from one of the Northern States, who saluted him with:
"I say, Bell, that was a good speech of yours moir was seized with a severe fit of sich

If Mr. Bell is elected to stay at home, he will adorn that position and write for the Ledger.

Life of Breckinridge.

BY A. MINER.
The subject of our story was born on the day The subject of our story was born on the day of his birth, on the Cincinnati Platform, and is chiefly noted for his eloquent silence on all public occasions. Being of a flery disposition, the Breckluridge coal was appropriately named after him; and it is a question with us whether he is more noted as a duellst or a facilist. We can say little more of him than that he was born of Southern, but honest parents, and has acquired some tame as an artillerist by his management of the celebrated Buchanan, which will be discharged on the 4th of March uext. Mr. Breckinridge is rather sharp in conversation as Is proved by the following by the following ANECDOTE.

ANECDOTE.

In the rear of Mr. Breeklardge's private resl'dence is a green sward, on which is located a pen for hogs. One day, while he was standing by this pen (then compt) with a triend, watching the motions of a hog that was luxuriously rooting the sward just before them, one of the negroes came from the house and filled the trough of the pen with swill. The hog heard the gush of the swill, and looked wistfully loward the pen and then had, at the place, where he had oen, and theu back at the place where he had seen rooting, as though undecided what to do shout it. Flually, however, the swill prevailed, and, with a decisive grunt, he trotted toward the

When General Houston was informed that he had not been nominated by the Charleston Convention, he pressed his handkerehief to his tear-dimmed eyes, and exclaimed, hurriedly:
"I accept. Go and tell the people that I accept for their eakes."
Samuel Houston was unanimously nominated for the Presidency by the Washlugton Monument Convention of this city, and will probably receive votes in every State except Texas. The assertion that he should have been nominated as Vice President of the Douglas ticket on account of his many vices, is unworthy of attention for a moment.

The Memphis Appeal of last Friday puts forth the following batch of items:

There were 192 bales of cotton shipped from this port by river yesterday, 125 of which were taken for New Orleans, and the remainder for Cinciunati. Our local packets encounter great difficulty in the employment of laborers while in port, owing to the hot weather. They charge exorbitant rates, and yesterday refused to work at any price. Thus both the Platte Valley and H. D. Mears were detailed until a very late hour last night discharging and receiving. The very reverse is the case at St. Louis at present, where laborers are as plentifin as flies in dog days.

The Gen. Auderson is running between Columbus and Cairo at present in place of the R. B. Cheney, which is awalting her new shaft and some other repairs at St. Louis.

Speaking of the Cairo and Columbus trade, the Gen. Anderson is making the most of it at present. The cost of the passage between the two points, a distance of twenty-five miles, is $4.50, including a stateroom and breakfast. The fare on the Jacob Strader between Louisville and Cinciunal, a distance of one hundred and fifty nilles, it but $2.00, and the trip inclindes a stateroom and three twents, that would tempt the appetite of a prince.

A handsome little schooner has just heen completed at Columbus Ky, and is now receiving a cargo for come port of South America.

Messre Eads & Nelson are actively engaged in the work of recovering the railroad irou raila, &c., from the wreek of the steamer Orh, and have met with graftifying enceess.

The body of a female, badly burned, was found The Memphis Appeal of last Friday puts

The body of a female, badly burned, was found floating in the river, by the bands on the bell-boat, near the Tennessee and Kentucky line, on Monday, Mr. Saint Wood, freight clerk on the steamer II. D. Mears, has left for the mouth of Limestone, Mr. Ed-ward McMichael having taken life place temporarily. Considerable rivalry exists between the new packet C. I. Hilman, and the mail packets in the Memphis and St. Louis trade. As a consequence, the rates of down freight between the two points have been re-duced in a ratio of ten cents per hundred.

following in regard to the crops in Great Britain and this country:

The agricultural reports from Enrope are in striking contrast with the favorable intelligence we have with reference to the crops in this country. The Mark Lane Express, is about as good authority as could be quoted; but representing, as it does, the farming interests, it is liable to lean to that side, by giving a darker shade to the reports than the facts, looked at from a more dishiterested point of view, might seem to warrant. We conclude, therefore, that the condition of the crops is at least, not worse than represented; but, at he same time, it is undoubtedly irne, that the prospects are decidedly gloomy, and a heavy deficiency in the yield may be expected. It is somewhat remarkable that, while Great Britain has passed through a period of several years of good crops, the harvests in the United States have been seriously deficient; and now, as we appear to be getting into a fection; and now, as we appear to be getting into a
